Following two-and-a-half years of campaigning, London's council of mayor has today revealed plans to limit the number of Londoners to five or fewer from next year. The new rule would see each Londoner able to have access to two at-home private bathroom facilities. The councillor stated that three was too many and that such a large family would be too big to fit in the city. The extra space would make it easier for the Londoners to meet any potential romantic partners. The newly-confirmed future mayor, Boris Johnson, made the announcement with his two representatives on the 10-member council after convincing the other nine to help him achieve his vision. It is feared that the new measure will create overcrowding as the results of last year's mayoral elections showed that the electorate wanted at least five more residents per household. Mr Johnson has already agreed to allow London to grow into the Thames Estuary, where he plans to build a fleet of giant, non-submersible cargo ships capable of carrying the world's sewage and toilet water to new land-fill sites around London. He also plans to build a wall around London to protect the city from the rising sea levels. In a speech, Mr Johnson said: "I have set London on a course to reach the mythical five-million population." He continued: "The time for a big bang, for a C-bomb of a population increase, is long gone. We must adjust, we must change, we must make room for the city to grow. By growing, we save money, we save spaces, we save lives. London can easily grow to five million with no loss of quality of life. "I believe that it's time we voted with our feet, and by that I mean allow our population to grow outwards. Let's take a holding bin, and pop over to Hackney to see what we could do with the land there. It's a very difficult and delicate balancing act, and a subject on which I intend to be the expert councillor. We are all counting the days until the Olympics take place here, I want to make that extra room available. "We have to expand if we are to be a multi-cultural city, and to accommodate the world. We are a world city already, of course, but we are a world city with a population of three-point-five million. It is only right that the world's population should flood over here

REVIEW – AVVO by Joie Brusselmans This week I would like to offer you a review of AVVO by Joie Brusselmans. Is this tool for small businesses or just every entrepreneur? I will try to show you everything you need to know about this tool. AVVO by Joie Brusselmans I would like to start by saying that this review will be the longest ever published on but that is because I wanted to explain everything in the best way possible. Furthermore, you don't have to worry that this review will be complicated to understand. It will be different because I want to show you everything you need to know about it in one guide. AVVO by Joie Brusselmans Review Let's start with a case study. Although, I would like to stress that my case study was not created by AVVO, but by me. Case study My name is Denis. I was having difficulties finding more business for my digital marketing company. My main problem was that I was working for less than I could. Since one of my clients wasn't paying the others I had to do more work without being paid for it. Because of this I had to make choices. One of those choices was to focus only on customer support, which was my passion. The other choice was to focus on other services. That would mean less income per month, but more customers. At that moment, I was working with just one client. I thought that I would be better off to use my skills for other companies instead of my own. I sent my proposals to a few companies but none of them responded. What I did next was that I started advertising on Google and reached a huge number of customers. I liked that. I became more and more popular and I started to sell my work. One of the clients I was working for before said: "if you can do my project, I would be glad to pay you!". That was a great opportunity for me to discover a new company, but I didn't have enough time for that. So, I needed a faster way to find new customers. I discovered AVVO and read its reviews. At first, I thought it was another expensive tool, but I decided to give it a try. So, I applied and paid money for the subscription. AV
